

A History of the Council's Major Accomplishments

Year	Summary
1975	Produced its first public policy document entitled De-Institutionalization Action Plan . The Department of Health and Social Services adopted the recommendations in the report, which became the basis for the creation of community-based services.
1981	Drafted a nation leading law to reform guardianship procedures. The Alaska legislature passed the Council's model statute.
1984	Adopted and promoted service principles . The principles are used today to guide the delivery of services and supports to individuals with developmental disabilities and their families.
1986	To meet the needs of students with significant developmental disabilities and intensive needs living in rural areas, the Council created the Special Education Service Agency (SESA) . Serving as SESA's Board of Directors, the Council assures that the organization continues to serve rural districts.
1986	Led the effort that involved over 200 people to plan a comprehensive, coordinated statewide service system of early intervention for infants and toddlers with developmental disabilities. In 1991, the Alaska legislature agreed to adopt these new services and have the Council serve as the Interagency Coordinating Council (ICC) .
1986	Successfully advocated for Personal Care Assistance Services for people with severe or multiple disabilities to be added to the Medicaid Options list.
1987	Initiated the collaboration of beneficiary groups by forming the Alaska Mental Health Lands Trust Coalition , which assisted in securing a settlement to the decade-long legal debate.
1988	The Council's Residential Services Task Force studied individual needs and costs to serve the residents at Harborview Developmental Center in their home communities. The Council's findings resulted in a policy of no new admissions into Harborview and the report was the basis for the Department of Health & Social Services to aggressively de-populate the center.
1989	Parents and Professionals Coming Together was the theme for the first Pathways Conference. The Conference, which was planned and supported by the Council, was a dream of Dot Truan, the Council's Executive Director for 15 years.
1991	Working with the Older Alaskans Commission (now the Alaska Commission on Aging), the Council made recommendations on how the state could use Medicaid to the benefit of people with disabilities. The result was the creation of Medicaid Waivers to serve people with home and community-based supports and the TEFRA Option , which provided families with Medicaid-funded medical services for their children.

Year	Summary
1994	To promote inclusion in public schools , the Council drafted changes in regulations. Once passed, the changes allowed school districts to receive funds for special education students based on the intensity of the student's needs rather than the place where they received their education.
1996	In order to establish a balance in the development of long-term care, the Council and the State Council on Independent Living succeeded in securing a moratorium on the licensing of new nursing home beds and a working group produced a report with recommendations impacting future development of long-term care.
1997	Worked with the State Independent Living Council and Governor's Committee on the Employment and Rehabilitation of People with Disabilities to plan the first-ever Disability Summit .
1997	Closure of Harborview Developmental Center and voluntary de-certification of Hope Cottages' ICF/MR facilities (now Hope Community Resources), which made Alaska the first state in the country with no public or private institutions for people with disabilities .
1997	Secured funding from the Alaska Mental Health Trust Authority, the Rehabilitation Services Administration (in 1998) and the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (in 2000) to increase the employment rate of Alaskans with severe disabilities. With award of Department of Labor funds to the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation and Social Security Administration funds to the Center for Human Development in 2000, became part of the broader Alaska Works Initiative .
1998	Worked with People First of Anchorage, the Center for Human Development, and the Disability Law Center to plan and coordinate the International People First Self-Advocacy Conference in Anchorage for over 1,000 people from 18 countries.
1998	With the State Independent Living Council, successfully advocated for passage of the assistive technology lemon law and the puppy guide dog bill .
1998	As a result of the advocacy of the Council, the State Independent Living Council, the Governor's Committee on the Employment and Rehabilitation of People with Disabilities and the Disability Law Center, the State legislature passed a Medicaid buy-in for working people with disabilities . Alaska was the first state in the country to pass legislation and the second state to implement a buy-in program.
1998	Secured funding from the reallocation of savings from the closure of Harborview Developmental Services and from the Alaska Mental Health Trust Authority to implement core services for people waiting for services.

Year	Summary
1998	Conducted an examination of the two DD Waiver programs , which resulted in a number of recommendations for improvement.
